“Not all fish oil supplements are created equal, and when I recommend such products to my patients, I tell them to look for several important markers of quality. The product needs to be ultra-pure and virtually free of unwanted contaminants. It needs to deliver a full gram or more of EPA plus DHA per day. To encourage daily use, the product has to be convenient to take, and it should have no fishy aftertaste. And finally, I look for fish oil supplements that are fortified with vitamin D, an essential fat-soluble vitamin that too few of us get enough of. I consider fish oils to be next to essential for health, so I settle for nothing but the best.”
